Peace treaty signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt and Israel, neighbors but enemies for a generation, signed a treaty Monday to begin a new, fragile era of peace between Arab and Jew.

In a solemn ceremony on the front lawn of the White House, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin put their names to Arabic, Hebrew and English copies of a treaty promising mutual recognition, respect and peace.

"Peace has come!" declared a beaming President Carter, whose personal intervention brought the talks back to life after they had stalemated on the details.

Carter quoted the Bible and the Koran, and he offered a personal prayer that Arabs and Jews may one day be brothers.

Sadat, replying, declared: "Let there be no more bloodshed between Arabs and Israelis."

"Let us work together until the day comes when they beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks," the Egyptian said.

Carter quoted the same words from Isaiah.

"No more war," agreed Begin. "No more bloodshed. Peace unto you. Shalom, salaam, forever."

"Shalom" means "peace' in Hebrew. "Salaam" means "peace" in Arabic.

Sadat and Begin both praised Carter profusely. Sadat called him a man of compassion; Begin said Carter's work would be remembered for generations.

But agreement did not come easily.

Even at lunch, only a little more than an hour before they signed, Begin and Sadat were still disputing what the treaty papers should call an area the Israeli leader insists on referring to as Judea and Samaria and most of the world calls "the West Bank."

Sadat and Begin signed, dramatically, on the windy lawn, after 30 years of hostility and four wars between their nations. Then Carter added his signature as a witness.

Thus, on a chilly, sun-filled spring afternoon, with 1,600 witnesses waving the flags of the three nations, a Moslem, a Jew and a Christian joined in solemnizing their handiwork.

After signing, the three grasped each other in a threeway handshake. Carter said softly, "I'm so proud of both of you."

Outside the White House gates, 1,000 protestors, supporters of Palestinians, shouted their opposition, charging Sadat had betrayed their cause by making a separate peace with the Jewish state.

"The Shah Is Gone, Sadat Is Next," their placards read, and "Palestine Is Not for Sale."

Carter, in his speech, called on the rest of the Arab world to join in the peace process, and he showered Sadat and Begin with ringing praise.

Without singling out any of the treaty critics by name, Carter said those "who would callously spill blood" should be aware of a joint determination by the United States, Egypt and Israel to "vigorously wage peace."

On the White House lawn, guests sat in rows of folding chairs. Among them were officials of both countries.

Television carried the ceremony back to the Middle East, where the occasion was marked with anger, hostility, threats, bombs, strikes, and mass rallies.

Effigies of Carter, Sadat and Begin were burned in refugee camps and Yasser Arafat, leader of Palestinian refugees, denounced each of them.

In the evening, 1,300 guests were invited to celebrate at a dinner in a yellow striped circus tent.

Agreement on the final details — the question of Israeli access to oil from wells to be surrendered back to Egypt — came in a Sunday night face-to-face session between Sadat and Begin.

In the treaty, Israel agrees to dismantle Jewish settlements and return to Egypt the vast Sinai desert seized in the Six Day War of 1967. Egypt agrees, for the first time, to formally recognize her Jewish neighbor as a member of the community of nations.

A score of Jewish settlements are to be dismantled, "a pain" that Begin says he will suffer to his last days. The Israeli withdrawl will take place over three-year period.

Arabs denounce treaty

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Much of the Arab world seethed with hatred and sorrow Monday, the day of peace for Egypt and Israel. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat vowed to "chop off the hands" of "the stooge Sadat, the terrorist Begin and the imperialist Carter."

"This is my worst day since I left my home in Palestine in 1948," one Palestinian, tailor Mohammed Khaldi, told a reporter. "I wish I were dead rather than be alive and witness this stigma and disgrace."

Effigies of President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Begin and Egyptian President Sadat went up in flames in Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut and elsewhere in Lebanon.

Palestinians staged general strikes in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip to protest the Israeli-Egyptian treaty. General strikes also paralyzed Lebanon's Moslem areas.

In Tehran, Iran, protesters seized the Egyptian Embassy and four employees as hostages but said they would not be harmed. A mob stormed the Egyptian Embassy in the Persian Gulf oil state of Kuwait, smashing doors and windows. Protesters occupied the offices of Egypt Air in Damascus, Syria.

In other world capitals, Palestinians, other Arabs and sympathizers paraded, sat-in and rallied to denounce a treaty that ends 30 years of war between Israel ed two years ago when Illene hing oil painting classes in aho. She decided to pack up y and belongings and move to Provo so she could enroll at BYU to "further her painting techniques," and obtain a degree to teach oil painting on the college level.

After her first year of school, Illene was offered a position by BYU with either the Bean Museum or as a teaching assistant on campus. She now reflects, "I should have taken the assistantship."

Hired at the museum to produce two paintings and aid in the move from the Grant Building to the new Life Sciences Museum building, Illene says she contracted the poisoning mainly from the chemicals used for mothproofing the museum animals.

Exposure

"I was constantly exposed to massive doses of chemicals," she said. "Open barrels of the white mothproofing crystals were always sitting around the room where I worked." To make conditions worse, ventilation in the Grant Building was insufficient and it was always warm.

Her health deteriorated until after the last fumigation of the animals following the dedication of the new museum, when she had to be hospitalized.

She says she was told by her supervisor at the museum, after contracting the illness, that the chemical was a well-known caustic agent, and " 'One man who had worked with these chemicals at BYU for several years had died of emphysema.' I wish I'd been told earlier," she said.

Diagnosis

In the following several months, Illene went to Denver, and then Dallas, to hospitals and specialists for chemical poisoning. After a week-long fast and a series of blood tests and skin biopsies, Illene's condition was diagnosed as "hypersusceptibility to certain chemicals, an immune deficiency and vasculitis," and she was presented with the rules for her new life.

She would not be able to read newspapers (the kerosene in the print makes her sick) and couldn't use simple machines such as typewriters and sewing machines because of the fumes emitted by their motors.

Benzene, its derivatives, petroleum products, even the turpentine used for painting — these are all forbidden substances as far as Illene is concerned.

Most perfumes and soaps affect her, and clothes and furniture made from synthetic fabrics have been discarded.

Special diet

Foods packaged or stored in plastic are contaminated, as well as naturally grown fruits and vegetables.

"If I ever want meat," said Illene, "I have to send back east for it and pay four or five dollars a pound." Regular meat is laced with chemicals from the grain fed to cattle.

When Illene violates the doctors' strict orders she says she pays greatly for it. Nausea, accompanied by difficulty in breathing and fatigue are only a few of the symptoms of her sickness.

She also says she has contracted asthma, bursitis (a swelling in the joints) in her shoulder, permanent lung damage, swelling in her face and occasional sensory-motor problems as a result of her condition.

"I look like a different person from what I did a year ago," Illene said.

Gas stations violate law

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

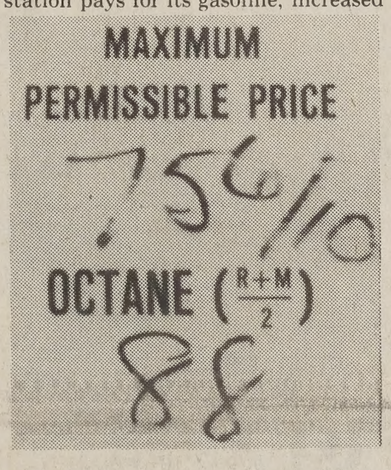
The majority of Provo gas stations are in violation of a federal regulation requiring display of maximum gas price ceilings and could be fined $2,500 by the Department of Energy.

Seventeen of 21 gas stations checked by the Daily Universe Monday were found to be in violation of the regulation. The federal requirement states that gas stations must post the maximum federal ceiling price on the gas pumps, said Jack Vandenberg, a Department of Energy (DOE) spokesman.

"The purpose of the regulation is keep the motorists informed of the maximum price and to give them something for comparison," Vandenberg said.

The ceiling is determined by each individual gas station, Vandenberg said. "The ceiling price is computed by taking the May 15, 1973 selling price of gas at the station and adding the increased costs of gasoline since that time," he said.

Increased costs include the price the station pays for its gasoline, increased utility and labor costs, Vandenberg said. "This means the ceiling price is different for each gas station," he said.



Federal law requires that stickers like the one shown above, telling the maximum gas price ceiling, should be posted on the pumps at gas stations.

The only enforcement of the regulation is provided through consumer complaints, the DOE spokeman said.

"We have released information urging motorists to notify us of any violations," Vandenberg said. "If a motorist drives into a gas station and does not see the sticker posted, he should notify us immediately."

Individuals may contact the Department of Energy to report violations by dialing the toll free number 1-800-424-9246.

The DOE directly contacts businesses who are reported, said Vandenberg. "We get in touch with the dealer and if he concedes the violation and corrects it, then there is no further action.

"The objective of the regulation is to attain compliance with the law, not to penalize. But if there is further noncompliance with the regulation, then further steps will be taken."

OPEC oil price increase 'inevitable'

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will probably raise oil prices considerably April 1, sources said Monday. An Iranian delegate said his nation had support for a 29 percent rise.

An increase by that much would raise the American retail price of gasoline and heating oil by about six cents a gallon.

"A price increase is inevitable," said an official of a key member of the 13-nation cartel. OPEC is meeting here to discuss the effects of oil shortages caused by the Iranian revolution and other factors on world oil supply.

The meeting was not designed for a price change decision, but sources said members had voted themselves authority to act on prices.

As part of the quarterly series of price increases approved by OPEC in December, the basic price of a barrel of crude oil is scheduled to rise 3.8 percent, from $13.35 to $13.84, on April 1. But that increase has been superseded by many OPEC members in the form of surcharges, generally of nine percent.

There had been speculation that OPEC would leave the scheduled increase alone and allow the price to rise through surcharges based on market factors. But it was apparent Monday that most members desired firmer action to raise the price.

Price increases and shortages already have had an impact on the American consumer. The Consumer Price Index showed that the cost of gasoline went up 2 percent in February to a level 18 percent higher than it was a year before.

Iraqi Oil minister Tayeh Abdul-Karim, an OPEC militant, said his nation might withhold oil from some nations to "punish" them for being involved with the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. Asked if that might mean an oil embargo against the United States, he said: "We will punish anyone who works against us."

One senior member of the Iranian delegation said Iran suggested a 29 percent increase. Cyrus Ebrahim Zadeh, an economic advisor to the finance ministry, said the idea had the support of Iraq, Algeria and Libya, and he added that he felt "the atmosphere of the meeting favors" such an increase. Algeria denied it was supporting an increase that large, but said it did want a price rise.

Saudi Oil minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said he would resist a price increase, and both the Saudis and Kuwait have said they want the market to determine the price.

While Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are influential in OPEC, observers said they may not have enough clout to block a large increase.

Candidate dismisses balloting complaint

By D. SCOTT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Marva Nebeker, former ASBYU candidate for Women's Office, has told her campaign manager to drop the complaint against the Elections Committee concerning balloting procedures.

"I'm out," she said, "and I don't want to give the appearance of a sour grapes candidate, because I'm not. I'm not the kind of person that is vengeful."

Miss Nebeker said she had very little to do with filing the complaint. "There were several people encouraging me to file the complaint, and I told them I would not do it," she said. Referring to Scott Omori, her campaign manager, she said, "I told him I wouldn't file a complaint, but if he wanted to do it, that would be fine."

The Daily Universe mistakenly attributed the filing of the complaint, and the things in it, to Miss Nebeker. The complaint was filed by Miss Nebeker's campaign manager, Scott Omori.

In the complaint, Omori charged the Elections Committee with "malconduct," claiming that placement of Miss Nebeker's name after Jill Harris' on every ballot "resulted in a substantial unfair advantage to Miss Harris."

With the exception of the names of those involved, the charge is identical to one made in the complaint filed by Dave Christensen's campaign manager, Kim Woolley. Christensen lost to Sharman Smoot in the Academics Office race by 65 votes.

Miss Nebeker said most of the encouragement for her to file the complaint came from those involved in or aware of the Christensen case.

"I definitely think we had a case," she said. "I think things may have been different were the balloting procedures done properly. But I don't want to hurt anybody — myself, Jill Harris, or ASBYU."

"Many people are a little disappointed in me," she continued. "They say, 'I didn't think you were that kind of person,' and I'm not. I only agreed that I would not object to a revote if they decide one was constitutionally legitimate."

Miss Nebeker said she wanted those who had supported her in her campaign to turn their support to Miss Harris.

Shroud of Turin being tested

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Tests to determine if the Shroud of Turin is really the burial cloth of Jesus Christ won't be completed until next year, but one researcher says "there is a strong sense that we're dealing with a potential impact that is incredible."

The researcher, Ken Stevenson, an IBM data processor from New Orleans, is one of those who has been examining the 14-foot linen shroud, housed in Turin, Italy. It shows a pale sepia image of the front and back sides of the corpse of a 5 foot-7 bearded man. Dark blotches appear at the wrists and ankles, on one side of the chest and around the scalp.

The markings suggest those suffered by Jesus at the Crucifixion about 30 A.D. Although many persons believe the shroud to show the image of Christ, the Vatican has never taken an official position.

Amin reported ready to fight

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin claimed he was besieged by 20,000 Tanzanian troops and 12 tanks at his Entebbe residence Monday. He said God-fearing men such as himself should expect these problems, and vowed to fight his way out with a handful of help.

Ugandan exiles claimed the tanks belonged to mutinous Ugandan soldiers, but there was no other indication that any such siege was taking place. Residents of Entebbe, 20 miles north of the capital of Kampala, reported no tanks, no troops and no fighting. They said the road to Kampala was open.

Freely conceding he has lost every presidential race since 1948, the 71-year-old Republican launched his New Hampshire campaign Monday on a positive note.

"1980 is going to be my turn," Stassen said. "There is an urgent need in America for what I can provide and this time I think I'll get the chance and prove it."

Although Stassen acknowledges his name has been "on some ballot, somewhere" during the last eight presidential elections, he said 1980 "is the first time I'll be running for myself."

GREAT LAKES, Ill. (AP) — Jack Garwood said Monday there is "no way" that his son, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who was missing in Vietnam for nearly 14 years, is guilty of desertion or other charges that could lead to his execution.

"I don't believe them (the charges)," the senior Garwood said. He added that whatever his son did, it should warrant no more than "a spanking."

The elder Garwood said nothing could compare with his reunion with his son, who was declared a prisoner of war in 1965. The Marine's brother said it "started raining in the room."

Landmine detonation postponed

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — A storm moving into western Utah forced the Army to postpone Monday's scheduled detonation of 26 combat landmines, each believed to contain two gallons of lethal nerve agent VX.

Base commander Col. James R. Klugh said weather permitting, the detonation would take place Tuesday.

"We must be able to determine precisely and without doubt that the agents remain and are not spread out," Klugh told reporters.

The rusting, decaying mines were found in a remote area near the center of this base in the Great Salt Lake Desert last January.

They were discarded and eventually forgotten after a series of open-air chemical tests in 1963, although VX is so deadly that even a couple of drops on the skin can kill within minutes.

Arab states led by Syria and Iraq pressed their diplomatic campaign for pan-Arab economic and political sanctions against Egypt.

Treaty signing festivities 'restraine

TEL AVIV (AP) — Although worried over their treaty with Egypt, Israelis put up flags and banners proclaiming "Shalom" in honor of the dawn of peace Monday after 30 years as a fortress country at war.

Celebrations were restrained, and Israelis in this city of 380,000 showed little inclination to rejoice spontaneously. Officials left the option of whether to organize celebrations up to local communities.

Large screens were erected in several towns so Israelis could gather in public and watch the live telecast of the Washington signing ceremony. A special stamp was issued in honor of peace, and quickly sold out. Youth movement members laid flowers on the tombs of war dead throughout the country.

The newspaper Maariv splashed color reproductions of the Egyptian, Israeli and American flag across its front page and editorialized: "This is the day we hoped for."

But Ettie Shahar, a 25-year-old hairstylist, reflected the misgivings of many Israelis when she said: "I'm scared. Even if the Egyptians do want peace, how will they stay out if other Arab states attack us? How can they stand against their own brothers?"

Social worker Rachel Aran said: "I feel I don't know enough about what we are giving up. I get the feeling that each time we made a concession we left the Egyptians with less problems in case they want to attack us in the future."

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, demonstrations were reported by Palestinians who complain that the ignores their rights.

Egypt

Peace treaty elicits mixed feelings

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Uncertain, apprehensive, joyful, millions of Egyptians on Monday night watched their televisions, tuned in their radios or simply listened for the pealing of bells announcing the birth of peace for their land.

Not all welcomed the treaty with Israel. Officials said public gatherings were discouraged Monday night out of concern that treaty opponents, calling it a betrayal of the Palestinians and other Arab states, would try to disrupt them.

The ruling National Democratic Party of President Anwar Sadat planned rallies throughout Egypt for later in the week.

Monday night's organized events were simple — the lighting of mosques and ringing of church bells at the moment of the treaty signing in Washington, 9 p.m. here; the presentation of a "flag of peace" to the captain of the Norwegian cruise ship Sagafjord as it carried 400 American passengers through the Suez Canal; and the piping of ship whistles along the canal.

Many Egyptians had mixed feelings about the post-treaty period. They were relieved that the state of war was ending, but continued to have doubts about how much the Israelis can be trusted.

"On the first day of peace, I shall be happy like every one else, like a man who is so drunk he can't think," said George Dimitry, a retired teacher of English.

"But on the second day and thereafter I shall be thinking and watching. If the Israelis are arrogant and defiant, as they a to be, then it won't work."

The difficult negotiations of 16 months cooled much peace enthusiasm here, but many Egyptians still seem timistic Monday, particularly about the prosperity they will come with peace.

"Is there anyone who hates peace? No, it is good," sai Omar, a 50-year-old doorman at an apartment building middle-class suburb of Heliopolis.

She is most disappointed that her job at the museum had to be discontinued and says, "I was excited at the prospect of filling a museum with my paintings."

Before she was hospitalized, Illene started a "Beaver" painting for display in the new museum, and arranged a diorama to be placed in front of the painting. Within a few weeks after being placed in the hospital she was told by a friend that another painter had been assigned to complete the mural "and the decision was kept secret from me."

Neither BYU nor the Bean Museum has assumed responsibility for Illene's condition. Her workmen's compensation payments were terminated upon release from her position at the museum, and she has since had no source of income other than meager monthly welfare payments.

When she gets back on her feet, Illene hopes to be able to relocate to where the environment is better for her health. For her condition, Provo is one of the worst places for Illene.

Water color

The Utah Rehabilitation Department has presented Illene with three books on water color painting and has promised to buy her a set of water colors soon.

She is happy at the prospect of having some place to funnel her talents, but fears the transition from oil painting to water colors will be a difficult one.

"It will probably take me at least two years to adjust," said Illene, "and then another two to build up my talents."

Another possibility is quash painting (opaque water color), which is water-based but uses similar techniques as oil painting. For now she can only wait, and hope the promise isn't forgotten.

In the meantime, Illene spends much of her time reading, and says occasionally she goes to the library to check out a "stack of books." For the rest of the time she says she is "pretty much limited to staying at home."

Illene isn't bitter about what's happened to her. She says "bitterness is only self-destructive.

"But it hurts that no one seems to care about it. Everyone pretends that I just don't exist anymore."

Teamsters union prepares to prevent Carter strike halt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union, reportedly armed with overwhelming strike authorization from its rank-and-file, is taking unusual legal steps it hopes will stop President Carter from halting a possible nationwide trucking strike next week.

The union asked a federal judge Monday for permission to question government officials in hopes their answers will prove that Carter cannot use the Taft-Hartley Act to order workers back to their jobs should the union order a walkout after midnight Saturday.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court here, the nation's largest union raised the threat of a strike by up to 300,000 drivers and warehouse workers within a week.

The suit said it "appears unlikely" bargainers will settle on a new agreement by Saturday, when the current pact expires, in part because of government interference in the talks, which were resuming today.

Without an agreement by Saturday or "reasonably soon thereafter," the union said, "some form of economic recourse will be resorted to by the parties" — a strike or an industry lock-out.

The suit was filed as scattered union locals around the country reported their members had overwhelmingly voted this weekend to allow leaders to call a strike.

Union officials here said they had not yet completed the tally, but expected a lopsided vote favoring strike authorization.

Workers needed for homecoming

Plans are already underway for Homecoming 1979, and students are needed to work on the committees, according to Jennifer Johnson, 1979 Homecoming chairman.

"Since Homecoming will be early next year, (Sept. 29), almost all plans need to be made before the semester begins," said Miss Johnson.

Students interested in applying for the committee should contact Miss Johnson at 377-8046, or see her in the Social Office Monday through Friday between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Heritage Mountain

Critic opposes bond

By DEANA LLOYD
Universe Staff Writer

A letter opposing the industrial revenue bond given to Heritage Mountain by the Provo City Commission, was presented to the commission during their Monday morning meeting.

W.R. Liechty, 1465 Apple Avenue, Provo, gave the letter to Provo Mayor James E. Ferguson after the commission had finished with their regular business. The letter opposed the inducement bond on the grounds that Abacus Cities of Canada has guaranteed the developers full funding, and the city shouldn't become involved.

"The tax free industrial revenue bond will make the city responsible no matter how responsibility for the bond is denied," the letter said. "Lending Provo City's name and annexing forest land places responsibility on Provo City in two ways."

The mayor is committing the citizens of Provo with the financial responsibility for access routes, enlargement of the airport, water commitments, etc., the letter said.

In the letter, Liechty cited a recent Dunn and Bradstreet report on a temporary limited partnership between Heritage Mountain and Abacus Cities.

"I think the city should know who they are dealing with before committing themselves on the bond," he said in the letter. "Considering the past track record of the developers, great caution should be exercised."

Liechty left the meeting before the mayor or commission had time to comment on the letter.

"I don't think Mr. Liechty understands about the bond," Ferguson said. "I wished he had stayed so we could respond to his letter."

"Fair minded, reasonable individuals who have availed themselves to the facts, know that the revenue bond practice in no way obligates the citizens of the community," Norm Nielson, vice-president of Wilderness Associates, said. "Why should Heritage Mountain and their funders be asked to pay a penalty by not being given the right to use the revenue bond process."

The inducement bond allows the company to use the city's bond rating to obtain loans at lower rates.

The bond system is just a way of funding projects at lower interest rates and is used in every community, according to Nielson.

Earlier in the meeting the commission passed an oral resolution allowing the mayor to sign an underground service agreement with Billings Technological Park. The agreement provides for a subdivision planned by Billings.

Attorney selected to lead bar

Utah County's deputy attorney has been selected president-elect of the county bar association and appointed to the board of the Public Defenders Association.

Michael Esplin was named president-elect at the bar association's annual elections meeting and will take office on Jan. 1. His appointment to the Public Defenders Association's board is an "adopted procedure" in which the president of the bar association becomes a member of the board, he said.

"It creates an area of concern," Esplin said, referring to the situation in which he is a prosecutor and also a member of the board of the Public Defender's Association.

Esplin said he felt he could empathize with the needs of the county's public defenders since he was Utah County's first public defender before becoming county deputy attorney.

According to the procedures, the board of the Public Defenders Association consists of one county commissioner, one judge, the head of the county's personnel division, and three lawyers, Esplin said.

As a member of the board, Esplin will be setting general policy guidelines and working with financial matters. As president of the bar association, he will be working with committees, policy matters and deciding on programs the association should pursue.

The services of the Public Defenders Association are available to people "after evaluation by a judge to determine if the person is able to provide their own counsel," Esplin said.

The person must be charged with a crime where they could be incarcerated, he said. Each county pays the public defender's fee, Esplin said.

Spartans win crown!

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Michigan State threw a net around Larry Bird with a brilliant zone defense and Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 24 points as the Spartans defeated the Indiana State Sycamores 75-64 Monday to win the NCAA basketball championship.

The loss ended a Cinderella season for the Sycamores, who had stormed out of nowhere to the top of The Associated Press poll and had won 33 straight games before the final.

Bird, who had been killing just about everyone this season with a 29.0 scoring average, had to work hard for his 19 points against the Spartans' two-three zone, which sagged on the blond bomber every time he went to the basket.

The national championship was the first for Michigan State in its fourth appearance in this tournament.

The Sycamores never led after the opening minutes and trailed by as many as 16 points several times early in the second half. But they made it interesting with a late 12-2 flurry behind Bird that chopped Michigan State's advantage to 52-46 with 10 minutes left in the game.

Johnson then spearheaded a rally that put the Spartans in command and quieted the usually raucous Indiana State fans in the noisy crowd of 15,410.

Johnson scored seven points in an 8-4 burst that moved the Big Ten Conference power's lead to 61-50 with 5:06 left in the game.

Bird, who had been a terror in this tournament in four previous games, was so stymied by the rugged Michigan State defense that at one point he went more than 13 minutes without a field goal.

Foul trouble hurt both teams in the closely called game, and the calls had both coaches bitterly complaining to the officials throughout the contest.

DePaul turns back Penn

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Freshman Mark Aguirre scored 34 points, including eight in overtime, as DePaul turned back fired-up Penn 96-93 in the third-place game of the NCAA basketball playoffs Monday night.

Indiana State met Michigan State in the second game for the national collegiate championship.

Leading by 46-23 with about four minutes left in the first half, the Blue Demons seemed to have the game locked up. But Penn came back to make a game of it behind Tony Price, who scored 31 points.

Price tallied six points in the last three minutes of the first half, helping Penn chop the deficit to 54-43 at intermission.

Then, Price and Tim Smith, who scored 16 points, triggered a second-half rally that finally enabled the Quakers to tie the Blue Demons at 83 with 1:08 left in regulation. It was a basket by Price that pulled the Quakers even.

But then Aguirre hit two free throws, giving the Blue Demons an 85-83 lead with one minute to go. A jumpshot from the key by James Salters with 11 seconds remaining sent the game into overtime tied at 85.

The extra period belonged almost exclusively to Aguirre as the stocky forward scored eight of his team's 11 points.

Y netters score nine on Weber

BYU's women's tennis team netted an easy 9-0 conference victory yesterday over Weber State, helping the the Cougars maintain their undefeated league status, with a 10-0 record.

All Cougar players in the match jumped up four team seeds, as BYU's top four players didn't compete. "We thought it would be better competition if we started with number five," Cougar Coach Ann Valentine said.

As it turned out, Weber still didn't provide much competition. Lani Wilcox set the pace of the match by quickly acing Lee Ann Thomson 6-0, 6-0 for the number one singles title.

Cougar Lori Barlow, playing in the number four spot, joined Wilcox in the singles shut-out ranks, as she blitzed Joan Critchlow 6-0, 6-0. Between Wilcox and Barlow, BYU's Barbara Barnes beat Roxanne Suteras, 6-0, 6-1 for a second seed victory, and Mindy Wilcox beat Weber's Monica Graff at number three, 6-1, 6-1.

Putting in Cougar victories in the fifth and sixth spots were Lori Judd, who downed Sydney Young, 6-4, 6-1, and Lanae Turley, who beat Margie Jones 6-3, 6-4.

Doubles action featured two more Cougar sweeps. Wilcox and Watts teamed up to defeat Thomson and Critchlow 6-0, 6-0, and Barlow and Barnes doubled to down Suterus and Graff by the same score. Turley and Judd also scored a doubles win when the beat Young and Jones 6-0, 6-1.

Today the full Cougar squad will face the University of Utah in another conference match, beginning at 6 p.m. on the indoor courts.

The Daily Universe

It's worth looking into, BYU—daily

Let's look deeper: The Daily Universe is a very successful publication, rated as the fifth largest campus daily in the U.S. It is directed towards a large audience—you, the BYU students. You are a unique and distinctive group of people, comprised of individuals with different interests and abilities, yet bonded together with common ideals.

The Daily Universe recognizes your individuality and designs its format towards you, not after some hometown local or metropolitan daily.

You may be interested in news and current affairs. You may enjoy cultural events or seeing a good movie. Sports and competitive games may be your real love. Whatever your tastes, the Daily Universe is there to serve you.

Still, not everyone enjoys the same things in a newspaper. That's why the Universe tries to balance its content.

When you look in the Universe you'll find: News, Sports, Entertainment, Editorial Pages (Wed. and Fri.), Photo Pages, "On The Tube", Editorial cartoons, "Peanuts", and lots more.

Remember the Daily Universe is your paper, so look into it closely—and see what it offers you.

Cougar gymnastics team takes 4th place

The Cougar Gymnastics team finished fourth at the NCAA West Regionals last weekend.

The Cougars compiled 425.15 points for their fourth place finish, which was just ahead of Colorado, which took fifth with a score of 411.65. Nebraska captured the title with a score of 440.20, a mark which barely squeezed past Oklahoma's 438.30. Third place went to Iowa State. ISU scored 430.25 points to finish in the top three.

Tim Dopp of BYU finished fourth in the pommel horse competition with a total score of 18.750. The Cougars also scored points on the rings when BYU's Isamu Maesato tied for seventh place with Jeff Martin of Oklahoma.

The Cougars moved into fourth place after the first day of competition. The opening round saw Maesato place 10th in the vaulting execise, fifth in the all-around, and ninth place on the parallel bars. Also in opening action Masahiko took fifth place the horizontal bar and 10th place on the parallel bars.

Oklahoma and Nebraska were tied for the lead after the first day of action, each squad scoring 220.85 points. Iowa State was close behind with 216.85, followed by the Cougars with a score of 212.55. The other top ten finishers were Colorado, New Mexico, Houston Baptist, Air Force, Colorado State, and Iowa.

The high bar was another strong event for BYU, with two team members in the final standings.

In this newly released publication from BYU Press, John Goddard recounts the fascinating story of his expedition down the world's longest river — the treacherous Nile — in makeshift kayaks.

Experience the dangers of man and nature . . . raids by hostile Arab river pirates, attacks by vicious bull hippos, the scorching desert sun and blinding sandstorms.

". . . the most amazing adventure of this generation."

Art shows on display

Displays ranging from a diamond press to LDS Church History audio-visual presentations, are being featured on campus as a special part of the 11th annual Mormon Festival of Arts.

The cubic high-pressure diamond press, designed and constructed by Dr. Tracy Hall of the chemistry department, is used in the manufacture of industrial diamonds. The press, which weighs 4900 pounds, is on display in the B.F. Larsen Gallery, HFAC, through April 6. The gallery is open from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

In the Harold B. Lee Library, displays of historic and artistic Mormon literature are currently being featured. The literature, located in the reference area display cases on levels four and five, is on display Monday through Saturday, 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., through April 6.

Outstanding student weaving and clothing construction is the theme of a "Contemporary Design in Apparel and Weaving" display in the Smith Family Living Center. The display, on levels one and three, is being shown Monday through Saturday, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., through April 14.

The LDS Church History modules will be presented April 2-6. The audio-visual modules are 15-20 minute television productions dealing with various topics of Mormon history. Modules include "Winter Quarters," "The Utah War," "Contributions of Early LDS Women" and "Spencer W. Kimball."

The modules will be shown continuously, 1-5 p.m., in Room 347, ELWC.

The Annual Film Festival will be held tonight at 8 in the Nelke Experimental Theater, HFAC, showing both beginning and advanced film students' projects.

The films, which include thoses made for film classes and professional films made by BYU students, will feature Wetback, directed by Dennis Lisonbee and written by Richard Dewey. Wetback is the true story of an illegal alien from Mexico living in Provo and chronicles his capture, deportation and ultimate reentry into the U.S. The film's executive producer is Ted Danielewski.

Another featured film is Spirit of the Game, a BYU athlete recruiting film.

Searchers look for lost campers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Searchers scanned the darkened Great Salt Lake Monday night in hopes that two men missing since Saturday may light a campfire somewhere along the vast lake or on one of its islands.

The main search by more than 50 sheriff's deputies and volunteers, a military helicopter, two fixed-wing aircraft and a 20-foot cruiser was called off because of weather late Monday afternoon.

It was to resume this morning.

Those missing, David Bowen, 22, and Greg Pomeroy, 18, both of Tooele, were last seen Saturday when they went to camp and boat in a two-man homemade kayak.

Their vehicle, camp supplies and dog were found on Stansbury Island late Sunday after parents of the young men said they did not return as scheduled after one night on the lake, said Tooele Sheriff Walt Shubert.

The sheriff said they apparently launched their boat in clear weather Saturday without setting up camp, and never returned to their base on Stansbury Island.

Shubert said their life-jackets were still at the launch site and there was a possibility they left in another vehicle, but he doubted it because the boat was missing.

He said officers were trying to locate another group of campers who were on the island at the time the young men arrived. He said they might be able to tell where Bowen and Pomeroy went.

Shubert said 22 men from the sheriff's jeep patrol and 27 from Davis County participated in the search.

It's a vast pond," he said. "It doesn't look that big until you fly over it." The lake is 75 miles long and 50 miles wide with several islands.

Speaker to discuss America's third revolution: social equality

America is in the midst of its third revolution — a social revolution fought under the banner of equality. But the revolution has veered off course.

This is the observation of Dr. Philip B. Kurland, the William R. Kenan, Jr. Distinguished Service Professor at The University of Chicago, who will speak at today's forum assembly at 10 a.m. in the Marriott Center.

The public is invited to attend and hear the speech on "The Quality of Inequality." The talk will be broadcast live on KBYU-FM and repeated Sunday at 9 a.m. It will also be televised on KBYU-TV, Channel 11, April 3 at 8 p.m.

"Although equality remains the symbol, it is not equality but caste that has become the goal," Kurland observes. "We are, in terms of Maine's thesis, moving backward from contract to status, from individual freedom to class rights determined largely by government (bureaucratic) discretion."

The speaker notes that the Supreme Court and the Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, have played a primary role in this revolution.

Kurland, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard Law School, has been professor of law at the University of Chicago since 1956. He was a law clerk to Justice Felix Frankfurter in 1945-46.

He founded and edits "The Supreme Court Review," an annual volume published by the University of Chicago Press.

PHILIP B. KURLAND

Kenan Distinguished Service Professor at University of Chicago Law School

"The Quality of Equality"

We are in the midst of the third American revolution—a social revolution fought under the banner of equality. But that revolution has veered off course. Although equality remains the symbol, it is not equality but caste that has become the goal. We are, in terms of Maine's thesis, moving backward from contract to status, from individual freedom to class rights determined largely by governmental—bureaucratic—discretion.

The Supreme Court and the Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, have played a primary role in this revolution. What has been ignored, in a pell-mell pursuit of equality of condition for groups whose membership is governmentally defined, is the cost in competing values: liberty, individualism, the rule of law, civility, culture, among them. What is needed is not the effectuation of an undemocratic dogma, but a balancing of values and an honest appraisal, not the least by the courts, of the costs as well as the gains that may be effected by the vast social change being imposed on American society.

"The Impact of Technology on a Religious Community

Utah's Agriculture, 1847-1900,"

In the late 19th century both quantitative and qualitative changes took place in Utah's Agriculture. These changes included irrigation, the determination of plants for which the territory was best fitted, dissemination of information about seeds and breeds, mechanization, and the development of markets. The paper focuses principally on the dissemination of information and the mechanization of Utah's agriculture, together with the role of the LDS Church in facilitating improvements and encouraging ruralism.

Cheerleaders

Tryout winners announced

By ROY JOHNSON
Universe Staff Writer

This year's cheerleading tryouts yielded one of BYU's best squads ever, including the present Miss Washington and a former kicker from BYU's football team, said Sterling Deuel, Athletics Office vice president.

Next year's Cosmo and the cheer and yell leading squads were chosen in tryouts held Wednesday and Thursday in 158 RB. Deuel, one of the judges, was impressed with the quality of those involved in this year's tryouts.

Six cheerleaders were chosen from a group of about 70 girls in tryouts lasting about four hours, said Deuel. Those trying out were given short jazz, pom-pom and flag routines to do.

Next year's cheerleading squad includes three new cheerleaders, Lori Wright, Julie Byers and Laurie Crebes, and three returning from last year's squad, Linda Madsen, Tari Hoyt and head cheerleader, Nancy Barker. Julie Byers is the present Miss Washington, said Deuel.

Yell leaders also went through a rigorous four-hour tryout and out of 25 who tried out, six were chosen. Participants led one original cheer and one which they were taught and performed gymnastics.

Those chosen include a former gymnast from New York, Mike Punda, former BYU kicker Bob Kittel, and four returned missionaries, Randy Grimsman, Jeff Andrus, Stefan Harlan and Dave Kern, head yell leader.

Next year's Cosmo will be "one of the best we'll ever have," said Deuel. "He can do more things alone than the last three Cosmos combined."

The 14 people trying out for Cosmo were given five minutes to do whatever they could, he said. Those trying out walked on their hands, rode unicycles, shot half-court shots, and rode skateboards on their hands.

April popular month for student marriages

By CHERYL GILLAM
Universe Staff Writer

Approximately 300 applications for marriage licenses will be received by the county clerk's office in April.

"The highest percentage of marriage licenses is given to BYU students," said Mrs. Veri Gates, county elections supervisor.

April popular month

Mrs. Gates said the most popular month for marriages used to be June, but in the past few years it has changed to April and August.

"We like those wanting a marriage license to come by the county clerk's office early in the day," she said. "We really get swamped around four.

"It takes about 10 minutes for each couple to get the license if they meet all the requirements."

Mrs. Gates gave a list of the marriage license requirements for Utah:

Requirements

—Marriage licenses must be obtained first from a county clerk's office; it need not be the same county where the wedding ceremony will be performed. The license is valid for 30 days.

—The couple must be at least 18 years old, or 14 years old with written permission of legal guardian. Applicants must appear in person to apply for the license.

—A certificate by a licensed physician must be presented to the clerk's office. Couples should ask their doctor for a "pre-marital" and not a "physical" examination. A "physical" costs a lot more than a "pre-marital" and is more extensive, Mrs. Gates said.

—Blood tests and medical examinations must be completed within 30 days prior to the application for the marriage license.

—Applicants for a marriage license in Utah must swear to this statement: "That we are single and unmarried and may lawfully contract and be joined in marriage. That we are not related to each other within the fifth degree of consanguinity."

—Cost of a marriage license is $5.

"Those applying for marriage licenses should check with the county clerk's office first to obtain all the correct information," Mrs. Gates said.

The clerk's office is in room 108 of the county building, situated on the block bounded by Center Street, University Avenue. First East and First South streets. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

'Shape-up' challenge

4-mile 'Fun Run' to be held April 7

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

Responding to a challenge from LDS Church leaders to "shape up," the 14 BYU stakes are sponsoring a campus-wide "Fun Run" April 7.

Garth Fisher, president of the BYU Second Stake, said LDS Church regional representatives Wayne Mineer and Edgar M. Denny challenged the BYU stake presidents to begin a fitness program for the members of their stakes. The resulting programs will be culminated by a four-mile "Fun Run" held in conjunction with spring stake conferences.

"The 'fun run' is not a race, it is an activity," Fisher said. "The only awards given will be to wards and stakes with the greatest amount of participation."

Fisher said the stake presidents were hoping for a turnout of nearly 14,000, which, according to the Guiness Book of World Records, would be nearly 4,000 more than the previous record for participation in such an event.

Although the "run" will be the culmination of many stake fitness drives, Fisher said it could also mark the beginning of many individual programs.

"Lots of people have been meaning to start a personal fitness program for some time, but just haven't had any reason to," the BYU P.E. professor said. "This event would be an excellent starting point for anyone."

Fisher, who is the director of the Human Performance Research Center on campus, said those who wish to begin their fitness programs now have plenty of time to get themselves in shape for the "fun run."

"People are usually too anxious to start jogging," he said, "and end up getting discouraged because they get winded so easily. The best way to start out is not by jogging, but by walking for 30 minutes a day for two or three days."

When a brisk 30 minute walk begins to leave the potential jogger invigorated rather than exhausted, it is time to start "jog-walking" — jogging until breathless, walking until breathing is normal again, and then jogging some more.

"Gradually, you will find your wind building up until you can jog the whole 30 minutes, and enjoy it," Fisher said. "The key is starting, and just doing something for 30 minutes a day. Don't worry about speed or anything. Just enjoy your increasing physical abilities."

Students who begin now on s fitness program should find thems able to jog the entire course of the run," which will begin at the Ma Center, circle around the temple wind up at Cougar Stadium. Bu "run" will not be limited to those w jog the entire course.

"We don't care if students run walk the whole way," Fisher said don't care about speed or style times. The important thing is tha come and participate, and begin keep their bodies in shape to enj rest of their lives."

Speaker to discuss Civil Service

The first director of the newly-created U.S. Office of Personnel Management will speak to BYU students about Civil Service reform Wednesday.

"SCOTTIE" CAMPBELL

Alan K. "Scottie" Campbell, former head of the Civil Service Commission, will speak at noon at the joint Institute of Public Management and School of Management public lecture series in 321 ELWC. At 4 p.m. he will address students and faculty at the School of Management-sponsored executive lecture series, 184 JKB.

Campbell, who was one of the principal architects of the Civil Service reform legislation passed by Congress last year, will speak on the subject, "An Efficient Government: Political Rhetoric or Real Possibility?"

Speaking of the reform bill, Campbell said, "T meetings marked not only the beginning of a new civil se system, but also a new practice of involving the governm political and career managers, military commanders, and sonnel officials in the joint formulation of personnel ma ment."

Campbell's government career began in 1960 as de comptroller for administration and research in New Yor has held 14 other government positions, including consu to the National Science Foundation, the Advisory Comm on Intergovernmental Relations and the National Institu Research and Development.

UNIVERSITY COMMITTEES

—YOUR VOICE IN CAMPUS ADMINISTRATION

WHAT IS A UNIVERSITY COMMITTEE?

A University Committee is a group consisting of faculty members, administrators, and one or two students. Brigham Young University has 24 committees. Each committee represents a major aspect of campus life, including such areas as athletics, the bookstore, films, forums, student code of honor, and traffic. Each committee meets periodically to discuss issues relevant to its area of concern, suggesting and formulating University policy.

HOW CAN YOU BE HEARD?

Your student representatives to the committees provide a direct link to these influential decision-making bodies. A display of the current Student Representatives, with their assigned committees and their telephone numbers, is located by the Information Booth on the main floor of the Wilkinson Center.
